Three reference sites:

For the Recipe app, I wanted to retain the color of the Django admin site so that it ties everything together, but in addition to the customization I added, the layout and style of the following three websites contributed to my newer design.

- allrecipes -- I like the header logo of the website. The header is very bare-bones, and I like the simplicity of the website's logo. <https://www.allrecipes.com/>

- Food Network -- Like Allrecipes, I think the layout is a bit busy, but a stripped down version for the Recipe app can be what makes the Welcome page simple, yet informative for what the user expects upon login. <https://www.foodnetwork.com/>

- Food -- I think the card layout is what I liked the most about this site, particularly the Don't Miss section. It's simple with a nice design, and the text content is short and memorable. The links for this site navigate to a recipe, but I think the benefit for the Recipe app are the short, yet informative, nature of the text. <https://www.food.com/>
